PRESIDENTS RAMBLINGS

Well here we are in June already, where has the year gone. I've been busy at work setting up to overhaul 300 electric train gear boxes from Sydney that go to Melbourne first to have the wheels removed from the axles then after we overhaul them they go back to Melbourne for wheels again then to Sydney. Not sure of the economics of all that transport but number crunchers greater than us mere mortals must know what they are doing. Anyway it is good bread and butter work for us.

The Sherman resto has slowed a little with the lack of available time, however when stripping the brake calipers found another odd thing. On this pair the guide pin for the anchor bracket is one solid pin not the smaller diameter pin with a sleeve as is normal (I think). The anti rattle pin on this side is different also.

I haven't seen a set up like this in my 32 years of owning P76s. Maybe it is a Holden variation or an early or late production run thing, who knows? Anyway they are very difficult to remove as you cannot drift them out from the back as they are assembled into a blind hole. I virtually wrecked the ends of these ones trying to turn them with stillsons and knocking with a hammer and punch on a groove in the pin. I will turn up some new ones for the reassembly.

We had a fair turn out for our run up to Birdwood, thanks to all those member and families.

We also had a short notice caravan trip to Moonta Bay for the Kernewek Lowender (Cornish Festival) with Filmers and Cuttings.

Great to see Peter and Sandra with their P and the Club trailer in tow in the Cavalcade on the Sunday

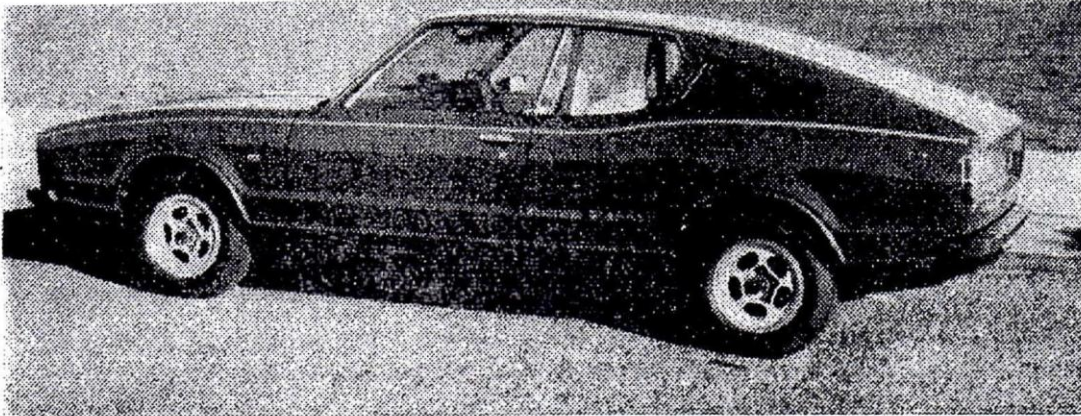

We won't be at the July meeting as we will be heading north for 3 weeks immediately after the 40th do in Canberra

The Force 7 coupe . . . going under the hammer after being rescued from the wrecker.

Last run for ghost cars

By MIKE KABLE

THE eight surviving prototypes of the car that never was and never will be, the P76-based Force 7 coupe, will be auctioned by Leyland Australia next month.

The company hopes to get up to $10,000 each for the cars — which could be said to be worth $625,000 each, because the stillborn Force 7 project cost $5 million.

They will go to the highest bidders at a sale in Sydney on September 9, but their buyers will be unable to drive them away, because they are not registered for road use.

A spokesman for the auctioneers, Geoff K. Gray Pty Ltd said yesterday that as Force 7s did not have certification approval from the Australian Motor Vehicle Certification Board, the compliance plates necessary for registration were not available.

The cars, in eight different colors, will go under the hammer after being displayed at the Sydney Motor Show starting on Friday, August 29. Potential buyers probably will want them for display purposes.

The prototypes were rescued from destruction last October after the then managing director of Leyland Australia, Mr David Abell, ordered them destroyed after a decision to cut back on manufacturing in Australia.

His orders caused a furore—unionists refused to take near-completed cars outside the factory gates and the company was inundated with offers of up to $25,000 a car from local and overseas collectors.

Mr Abell relented and used one Force 7 for an Australia-wide promotion campaign to help sell the remaining P76 sedans.

40th Anniversary Run to National Motor Museum Birdwood

When leaving from the Birdwood Mill as we “oldie locals” call it I threw out the question as to who could write an article on the Run for the magazine, it was suggested we write it while at Moonta for the Cornish Festival with the Filmers and Brays. This was all I could get from them

“Once upon a time in a Galaxy far far away”

So now I have to continue....

We met at the Civic Park car park Tea Tree Gully and left about 11 am with 5 Leylands, a Ford Territory plus the President towing the 2- Boot trailer we headed off via the Chain of Ponds (still low on water) to Birdwood.

We entered through the lower gate at the Museum car park to park on the main arena near the BBQ, Nigel, Andrew Lee and his boys hung up the banner to let people know we were there. After mandatory bonnets and the 2 boots boot lid up, a photo call the BBQ was fired up lunch was had and enjoyed.

The weather was kind to us although it was a bit chilly, some of the fellas took the tour of the museum others just enjoyed the chatting.

During the afternoon new member Andrew and his wife Jan arrived they had driven up from Millicent to join the party pleased to meet other members and put faces to names. They were interested to see the other cars and get ideas and pointers to assist in the restoration of their P76 and extended an invite to call and see them should we be down their way.
